Public Law 280

By Brett Miller-Mohican News Reporter

The Stockbridge Munsee Community is a Public Law 83-280 Tribe. In 1953, Congress enacted Public Law 83-280 to grant certain states criminal jurisdiction over Indians on reservations and to allow civil litigation that had come under tribal or federal court jurisdiction to be handled by state courts. The law did not grant states regulatory power over tribes or lands held in trust by the United States; federally guaranteed tribal hunting, trapping, and fishing rights; basic tribal governmental functions such as enrollment and domestic relations; nor the power to impose state taxes. It is important to note that Public Law 280 only altered the allocation of federal and state criminal jurisdiction. It did not reduce nor expand tribal criminal jurisdiction.

The states required by Public Law 280 to assume civil and criminal jurisdiction over federal Indian lands (mandatory Public Law 280 states) were Alaska (except the Metlakatla Indian Community on the Annette Island Reserve, which maintains criminal jurisdiction), California, Minnesota (except the Red Lake Reservation), Nebraska, Oregon (except the Warm Springs Reservation), and Wisconsin (except the Menominee Indian Reservation). The federal government gave up all special jurisdiction in these states over Indian offenders and victims. The states that elected to assume full or partial jurisdiction (optional Public Law 280 states) were Arizona (1967), Florida (1961), Idaho (1963, subject to tribal consent), Iowa (1967), Montana (1963), Nevada (1955), North Dakota (1963, subject to tribal consent), and one Mo-quaau-pee, or Hero, and one Un-nuh-kau-kun, or Messenger or runner, and the rest of the men are called young men.” As it is today, there are Council members and lawyers and others who work with the Sachem to protect voting rights and financial independence it has brought about, the tribe and its prosperity have continued to grow in the last two decades. According to one past leader, Aught Coyhis, “The tribe has grown from standing in line waiting for a handout, to standing at the front of the line and giving a hand up to its neighbors by providing grants to local governments.”

According to a passage from the book “Stockbridge, Past and Present” by Electa F. Jones, “The tribe has grown from standing in line waiting for a handout, to standing at the front of the line and giving a hand up to its neighbors by providing grants to local governments.”

Dr. Rachel Wheeler was a grad student in History and wanting to write her dissertation on some aspect of New England history that involved Native American and religious history. She was doing her work at Yale, and her mentor mentioned that all of Jonathan Edwards’s papers were held at Yale, but that no one had really studied his time as a missionary at Stockbridge. Rachel started looking at his sermons to the Mohicans at Stockbridge and was fascinated.

She soon discovered that there was another, very different mission to another community of Mohicans at Shekomeko in New York, so she started researching the Moravian mission started there in 1740. Rachel finished the dissertation in 1997, and over the next 10 years she turned the dissertation into a book. For the dissertation she had managed to get by using printed and English sources, but for the book she needed to be able to read the handwritten German manuscript sources.

Greetings to all my fellow citizens,

The Community meeting and the conversation that took place was long overdue, and folks are asking “what’s next”.

Based on the majority of what was spoken, and the desire to recognize declining enrollment, for adjustments to membership by including descendants, this all comes down to amendments to the constitution. For this to happen, and the biggest most ironic obstacle is, we need a Secretarial Election and in which, only residents can vote on. In order to get the BIA, the government body responsible for our predicament, out of our electoral process, we need to have a Secretarial election just to get rid of the Secretarial election, I disagree. Based on one particular viewpoint expressed, regarding “residents and exclusion”, I don’t think some of the resident population want any change.

Based on the numbers that were presented, 1395, and the number under the age of 21, 200 or so, this tells me that there are 1100 eligible voters if they all decided to come and vote. On average in odd numbered years when all seven seats are up, we average 500 votes cast, do the math, more folks don’t vote that do.

In order to get a true sense of what the majority of our membership think, we need an absentee ballot process, especially in light of the primary election process that was recently initiated. It was stated by our council that the absentee ballot process needs a Secretarial Election, I disagree! What parts of our constitution do we follow? If sections 1 & 2 under membership are followed only residents are members and only residents can vote, obviously that was changed.

Through the referendum process, either binding or advisory, we can accomplish constitutional revision without BIA interference. I would challenge anyone to disagree that the majority of the voters want to vote in all elections.

At the community meeting, I heard no one disagree with the establishment of a “base line roll.” The Tribal council has that authority, if they feel they need more community input, then solicit through the referendum or a census process. I for one would just vote on it, it was pretty clear that direction was stated. This is the first step; it rights many if not all wrongs that were committed after 1937-38.

We did not have “Blood Quantum” prior, why were members qualifications identified, reduced, diminished, taken away, and who authorized it? The one part of our constitution that is crystal clear, we and only we have the authority to determine our membership. Let’s do that by the elimination of a Secretarial election and by adoption of a process that affords all the membership the right to vote.

The events of 2016, when a minority have so much authority, cleared my mind up on a lot of things.

You don’t have to sit at the table to be a leader, we are all leaders and you are Indian no matter where you live.

An-nii-shik,

Joe Miller.

The Stockbridge-Munsee people can be very proud of the leaders they have put into the office of Sachem, or President. When February 24th rolls around and each Community member can take stock of why the day is actually a holiday or why it is important and be thankful for our leadership (Editor’s Note: Portions of this article were originally printed in the February, 2005 issue of the Mohican News. In our next issue we will examine the word Sachem as it relates to our people and our past).
As she was working on that, Rachel made her first trip to the stora. She knew Bill Miller and his family from Wisconsin for the Mohican History conference in 2001. It was an eye-opening experience for her—she learned a lot from Dot Davids and others during that trip and came to realize that the events that seemed so safely distant and past to her were of profound importance for the descendants of the people she had been researching and writing about. The impact of missions was a topic of current debate but of current experience. It was also during that visit that Rachael heard Bill Miller perform for the first time and she remembered having several conversations with people about how they were working to start reviving the Mohican language. Rachel had recently looked at a folder of materials in the Moravian Archives material and saw that the hymns included hymns in Mohican, Delaware and various Iroquois languages. At the time, she saw the hymns as interesting curiosities; her linguistic competence was too limited to give these sources much attention, but she was curious whether it might be possible to sing them again, and what insight the people working on Mohican language might be able to shed on them.

So, Rachel kept moving and completed her book, To Live upon Hope: Mohicans and Missions in the Eighteenth-Century Northeast, a comparative study of the Moravian (Shekomeko) and Congregational (Stockbridge) missions to Mohicans begun in the eighteenth century and moved on to other projects, including a study of the language of Joshua, a Mohican-Moravian man (and son of Nanhum/ Tassawachenam, also known as Joshua, senior) who lived from the 1740s into the early 19th century. Rachel wasn’t thinking about music at all when she wrote the first book and began to think about the second. But several things happened at about the same time that made a turn to the music seem so obvious. One reviewer of To Live upon Hope pointed out what she had somehow missed: music was everywhere in her book, yet totally unexamined. Rachel also got to know Bill Miller, who regularly performed in Indiana and shared the hymns with him. He was intrigued by the idea that there was a Mohican composer in the 1740s writing hymns in Mohican. A Mohican historian and friend of Rachels introduced her to a colleague at Butler University, Sarah Eyerly, who had recently completed her dissertation on important 18th-century Mohican communities. Once they started talking, she felt all the pieces were in place to bring the Mohican hymns back to life.

Dr. Sarah Eyerly first came across the manuscripts of hymns in Mohican in the Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, Moravian Archives in the summer of 2010. At the time, she was looking for examples of poetry and music written by women in Moravian communities in the eighteenth century. At least one of the Mohican hymns is attributed to the hymn-writing partnership of Joshua, Sr., his wife Bathseba, and the German Moravian, Johann Christoph Pyrlaes. Sarah was curious about the meanings of the hymns and how they were rendered with German phonetics? Could the sounds of Mohican be sounded like when the Mohican lived on this side of the Atlantic from that reservation, but that the main-focus was on Munsee rather than Mohican. When they found out about Chris Harvey who was working on his dissertation and a PhD student at CGS was working on a grant project with the Arvid E. Miller library. He came on board the project to help us. And, at the Mohican History conference in 2001, she was able to talk with Jeremy Mohawk.

Over the course of the past year, they had grant funding to work on the project, so they worked on several different collaborations. Sarah recorded the hymns with her historical performance group in the eighteenth-century Moravian style. The Moravian records provide a lot of information about life in the community, but not many descriptions of what the music sounded like when the Mohican residents sang, so they don’t know how much influence there might have been from Mohican musical traditions. Their second recording was new music done by Bill Miller to the Mohican language texts. And their final recordings were made when they came to the reservation in June, 2018. For the hymn “When the Sun is at Noon,” they used a bilingual arrangement at a Church of the Wilderness on Saturday, June 23, 2018, they worked with modernized arrangements of the hymns done by Brent Michael Davids. Brent had arranged to bring several choral students from UW Whitewater, who had been working with Brent’s arrangements, and Sarah’s recordings. The students served as vocal coaches as they learned first the pronunciation of the Mohican hymns, and then attempted to sing them line by line. Then they sang each hymn through in its entirety, while Brent recorded them. The recordings will be available to the Church so that they might use them to continue to help learn the hymns and incorporate them into services. They are very grateful to the church for the warm welcome they extended to both during their stay.

The information in this article was gathered from emails from Dr. Eyerly and Dr. Wheeler.

DIABETES AND CARDIOVASCULAR DISEASE

Diabetes is a condition that causes blood glucose (also called blood sugar) to rise to above normal levels.1

More than 30 million Americans have diagnosed and undiagnosed diabetes.2

Cardiovascular disease describes a range of conditions that affect the heart and blood vessels, including heart attacks and strokes.3

The longer you live with diabetes, the higher your cardiovascular disease risk. People with type 2 diabetes often have risk factors for cardiovascular disease, including high blood pressure, high cholesterol, obesity, and a lack of physical activity.4

Diabetes can damage your blood vessels and the nerves that control your heart and blood vessels.5

Having diabetes increases your risk of heart attack or stroke even when blood glucose is well managed.6

KNOWING THE IMPACT OF DIABETES AND CARDIOVASCULAR DISEASE

Cardiovascular disease is the leading cause of death and major cause of heart attack, stroke, and disability for people with type 2 diabetes.7,8

Nearly one in every seven healthcare dollars is spent directly treating diabetes and its complications.9

At age 60, someone with type 2 diabetes and a history of heart attacks or strokes may have a life expectancy that is 12 years shorter than someone without both conditions.10

The total costs of diagnosed diabetes in the U.S. are $327 billion (2017).11

MANAGING TYPE 2 DIABETES AND REDUCING THE RISK OF CARDIOVASCULAR DISEASE12

Talk to your doctor about your diabetes and risk of cardiovascular death, heart attack and stroke.

Make healthy food choices, including a variety of vegetables and fruits in many different colors, lean meats and plant based protein sources, and fiber rich whole grains.

Get at least 30 minutes of physical activity each day.*

Quitting smoking.

Find healthy ways to manage stress, like meditation.

Carbon Monoxide (CO) Poisoning Prevention

CO poisoning is entirely preventable. Protect yourself and your family by learning the symptoms of CO poisoning and how to prevent it.

When winter temperatures plummet and home heating systems run for hours the risk of carbon monoxide (CO) poisoning increases.

Every year, at least 430 people die in the U.S. from accidental CO poisoning. Approximately 50,000 people in the U.S. visit the emergency department each year due to accidental CO poisoning. There are steps you can take to help protect yourself and your household from CO poisoning.

CO is found in fumes produced by furnaces, kerosene heaters, vehicles “warmed up” in garages, stoves, lanterns, and gas ranges, portable generators, or by burning charcoal and wood. CO from these sources can build up in enclosed or partially enclosed spaces. People and animals in these spaces can be poisoned and can die from breathing CO.

How to Recognize CO Poisoning

The most common symptoms of CO poisoning are headache, dizziness, weakness, nausea, vomiting, chest pain, and confusion. People who are sleeping or who have been drinking alcohol can die from CO poisoning before ever having symptoms.

CO poisoning is entirely preventable. Protect yourself and your family by learning the symptoms of CO poisoning and how to prevent it.

CO Poisoning Prevention Tips

• Change the batteries in your CO detector every six months. If you don’t have a battery-powered or battery back-up CO detector, buy one soon.
• Have your heating system, water heater and any other gas, oil, or coal burning appliances serviced by a qualified technician every year.
• Keep vents and flues free of debris. Debris can block ventilation lines.
• Never leave the motor running in a vehicle parked in an enclosed or partially enclosed space, such as a garage.
• Never run a motor vehicle, generator, pressure washer, or any gasoline-powered engine less than 20 feet from an open window, door, or vent where exhaust can vent into an enclosed area.
• Never use a charcoal grill, hibachi, lantern, or portable camping stove inside a home, tent, or camper.
• Never run a generator, pressure washer, or any gasoline-powered engine inside a basement, garage, vehicle, or other enclosed structure, even if the doors or windows are open.
• If you suspect CO poisoning, call 911 or a healthcare professional right away.

Extreme Cold Temperatures on the Way

As temperatures drop, take steps to stay warm

Stockbridge Munsee Community - Dangerously low temperatures are forecasted for much of the state next week, and the Stockbridge Munsee Health and Wellness Center (SMHWC) wants to remind residents to take steps to be safe and warm.

“Freezing temperatures, wind chills, and winter storms can cause hypothermia, frostbite, and even death,” said Judy Heubel Community Health Outreach Director. “The best way to stay safe during extreme cold is to be prepared.”

In the 2017-2018 winter season, 38 people died from exposure to extreme cold. To protect yourself and your family during extreme cold, follow these safety tips:

• Stay inside. When possible, stay indoors.
• Stock a home emergency kit. Your home kit should include items such as food and water, cell phone and charger, flashlight and batteries, first aid kit, important medications, a weather radio, and a change of clothes. Visit readywisconsin.wi.gov/make-a-kit for more items and tips.
• Dress in layers. If you have to venture out, dress in several loose-fitting layers. Wear a hat, mittens, and snow boots. Use a scarf to cover your mouth and face.
• Winterize your car. Just as you winterize your home, you need one for your car too. Pack items such as blankets, snacks and water, a shovel, jumper cables, and sand. Visit readywisconsin.wi.gov/make-a-kit for more items and tips. Keep your gas tank at least half-full.
• Check on your friends, family, and neighbors. The elderly, babies in cold bedrooms, people who spend lots of time outside (e.g., the homeless, hunters), and people who drink alcohol or use drugs are more likely to be harmed from the cold.
• Make sure you have working carbon monoxide detectors. All homes and duplexes in Wisconsin are required to have properly working detectors on every level, including the basement, but not the attic or storage areas. Detectors can be purchased at most hardware stores for $20-50.
• Never run a gasoline or propane heater or a grill (gas or charcoal) inside your home or garage. Any heating system that burns fuel produces carbon monoxide. Use a battery-powered detector where you have fuel burning devices but no electric outlets, such as in tents, cabins, and RVs.
• Run generators at a safe distance (at least 20 feet) from the home. Never run a generator in the home or garage, or right next to windows or doors.
• Limit outdoor time for pets. Extreme cold is dangerous for animals too.
• Know the signs and symptoms of hypothermia. Warning signs include shivering, exhaustion, confusion, and slurred speech, and symptoms can look similar to intoxication. Call 911 if someone is exposed to cold temperatures and you see these symptoms.

Visit the Wisconsin Department of Health Services website for more information about staying safe during extreme cold.

Title VI Native American Caregiver Support Program Stockbridge-Munsee Community

The Stockbridge-Munsee Community Elderly Services program has grant dollars to offer services to the primary family Caregivers of our community’s “service area.”

What does the label “Caregiver” mean? Being labeled a caregiver means you are someone who provides care for another; this person is frail (unable to do things for himself) or most often suffers from a form dementia and Alzheimer’s disease.

Oftentimes you do not realize that you are a caregiver until you are overwhelmed with providing for the needs of a loved one while still trying to maintain your own life, career or other obligations to family and friends. Care giving may start with offering to pick up a few groceries or giving a ride to a doctor appointment and it may grow into being the sole provider for assistance with bathing, feeding, to comforting someone with a terminal illness.

Caregiving may be both challenging and rewarding.

Woodstove Changeout Program

Some of you have heard about a program to help tribal members get new efficient wood stoves. The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has such a program which will help the tribe give members of the community some funds towards the replacement of old, non-EPA certified wood stoves. These old stoves cause air pollution and bad health effects. An old, non-EPA certified wood stove can emit more than one ton of fine particle pollution into your area during the cold months of the year. These inefficient old stoves burn more wood than the new certified ones, pollute more and cause breathing problems. To qualify for a woodstove changeout, you must now be using an old non-certified indoor wood stove as a primary heat source, and when that stove is replaced, it must be physical destroyed and recycled. It cannot be relocated to another location, garage or rebuilding. During a changeout campaign, consumers receive financial incentives to replace old wood-burning appliances with cleaner home heating, such as EPA certified wood and pellet stoves, EPA qualified hydronic heaters and fireplace retrofits, gas or electric appliances. The Federal government shutdown has stopped all EPA activity and at this time we cannot apply for these funds, however when the shutdown is over, the environmental office will investigate the funding opportunity. The real pollution and health problem is dust and wood smoke can cause breathing problems with people. Particle matter or PM, that is ten times smaller than very fine beach sand, (10 micrometers in diameter or PM1) can get deep into your lungs and some may even get into your bloodstream. Of these particles, the ones that are 25 times smaller than the diameter of a human hair (2.5 micrometers in diameter) also known as particle matter 2.5 (PM2.5) pose the greatest risk to health. For further information please call Greg Bunker at (715) 793-4363.

Welch is heading Down Under

Waylon James Welch is a 17-year-old Junior in high school standing 6’0”. He is a shooting guard for the Gresham Wildcats who averages 15 points, 5 rebounds, 2 steals, and 3 assists per game. As an athlete, Waylon Welch has been invited to participate in the Down Under Sports Tournaments hosted on the Gold Coast of Australia. He is honored to be an ambassador of not only his Community, Tribe, and State, but also his country. He will be representing Wisconsin on the Boys Basketball Team during the summer of 2019. He is looking for sponsors to make donations towards the cost of competing down under. A major source of funds comes through voluntary contributions of family, friends, and business sponsors. Your sponsorship will be a very important part of fundraising for him and his team. This donation will help them fulfill their once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. If you would like to donate please visit the link below. https://downundersports.com/JBC-PQL.

Recently Marty Monfils, Assistant Manager at Shawano Walmart presented a $1,000 check to Esther Schutt, treasurer for the Gresham Scholarship Fund. The four students, Chance Hoffman (3rd grade), Colby Belongia (6th), Will Jensen, (9th) and Aurora Arce (12th) can all benefit from the donation. There is a reason they are so smiling! When they are a senior, to earn a scholarship all they have to do is to apply and have a “C” or better average. The current scholarship is $1,750 and historically has increased about $250 every two or three years. The Walmart grant is part of a long history of Walmart’s commitment to giving back to the communities where they operate. Helen Walton (the founders wife) once said,”it’s not what you gather, but what you scatter that tells what kind of life you have lived.”

Esther Schutt said “The support of the community has been unreal. Witness for yourself on March 30 when the annual banquet will be held at Pine Hills, you’ll have the opportunity to buy a pie for around $500! They’re really good pies! The raffles, silent auctions and other fun & games will make for an enjoyable evening!” You’ll find some really good items to win too… Sculpture by David Aschenbrener, paintings by Kate Boucher, a really sweet Savage, 93R17 rifle donated by Darvin Pieper to name a few. Federal Trade Commission Scam Warning

The Federal Trade Commission is getting reports about people pretending to be from the Social Security Administration (SSA) who are trying to get your Social Security number and even your money.

In one version of the scam, the caller says your Social Security number has been linked to a crime (often, he says it happened in Texas) involving drugs or sending money out of the country illegally. He then says your Social Security number is blocked – but he might ask you for a fee to reactivate it, or to get a new number. He will ask you to confirm your Social Security number.

In other variations, he says that somebody used your Social Security number to apply for credit cards, and you could lose your benefits. He also might warn you that your bank account is about to get off the phone. Then call the Social Security Administration, computers make it easy to show any number on caller ID. You cannot trust what you see there.

• Never give your Social Security number to anyone who contacts you in this way. Do not confirm the last 4 digits. Do not give a bank account or credit card number – ever – to anybody who contacts you by phone asking for it.

• Remember that anyone who tells you to wire money, pay with a gift card, or send cash is always a scammer no matter who they say they are.

If you’re worried about a call from someone who claims to be from the Social Security Administration, get off the phone. Then call the real SSA at 1-800-772-1213.

If you have spotted a scam, then tell the FTC at ftc.gov/complaint.

To learn more, you can go to Fake Calls about your SSN.

Support cont from page Eleven: however, it is very important that caregivers pay attention to the physical, emotional and financial problems that this role may cause. Caregivers need to remember to take care of themselves, it is important to maintain outside interests and activities with friends.

Respite care is available to you, as the Primary Caregiver, for companionship and supervision of your loved one so that you may run errands, keep an appointment or just take some time for yourself. A “loan closet” for needed medical supplies is available; a library of training videos/books, is also available.

The main purpose of the respite provider in the home is to ensure the safety of your family member in the absence of the primary family caregiver; it is very important for those who care for family members to take time-off to care for themselves both physically and emotionally.

A voucher system has also been set up so that the Caregiver can choose their own respite providers. This system allows the caregiver to enlist the help of a family member or friend and will alleviate fear and confusion to their loved one.

Respite providers will be compensated at an hourly rate, at a maximum number of hours per week, per funding dollars available. There is no “wait list” all those in need will receive assistance.

If you are the primary caregiver to someone, please don’t hesitate to ask for assistance. Call Stockbridge-Munsee Elderly Services at (715) 793-4236 for more information and find out what your Community has to offer to assist you during your care giving journey.

*Service Area is the original boundaries of the Stockbridge-Munsee Reservation which includes the townships of Bartelme and Red Springs.
