

Bring on Spring

It looks like spring is right around the corner! As the snow melts there are a few things we all should remember:

The forest road system is valuable and in an effort to protect access for everyone, spring breakup road restrictions will be going into effect soon. Most years the road closure date is around March 15th (going to be later this year) and restrictions run for a few weeks, however to keep the forest roads open to Tribal use as long as reasonably possible, this date fluctuates. Watch for a posting of this year's closing date at any Tribal posting location.

This road closure often coincides with the timeless tradition of collecting maple sap and if any enrolled members wish to use motor vehicles on logging roads to collect sap during this period; remember to contact the Forestry Department for your permit.

As the forest starts to green up, remember that the restrictions to cutting/trimming of oak trees go into effect April 1st. The last few years a lot of effort has been done to reduce the prevalence of the oak wilt disease and we all need to do our part to protect this great resource.

Finally, free-use firewood permits expire March 15th, so please contact the Forestry Department if you need a new one for this coming year.

The Semi-Annual meeting will be held on May 4, 2019. The time is yet to be determined.

Spring clean-up will be held May 13th.

Federal Court of Appeals to Hear Oral Arguments in ICWA Challenge That Would Upend Over 200 Years of Legal Precedent

Congress enacted the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) in response to alarmingly high numbers of Indian children being removed from their families and communities, many unnecessarily. Years of extensive research and testimony by Congress and others demonstrated that state courts, state agencies, and private adoption agencies often worked counter to the best interests of Indian children. In enacting ICWA, Congress created minimum federal standards for the removal of Indian children from their families, and it established procedural safeguards to ensure that state courts fully consider the best interests of Indian children when deciding Indian child custody cases.

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals will review the lower federal court decision in Brackeen v. Bernhardt that ignored centuries of Supreme Court precedent to strike down the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA), a law that protects the best interests of American Indian and Alaska Native children. The three-judge appeals panel will hear oral arguments in the case this morning on behalf of two federal agencies—the Departments of the Interior and of Health and Human Services—and five tribal nations—Cherokee Nation, Morongo Band of Mission Indians, Navajo Nation, Oneida Nation, and Quinault Indian Nation.

The United States and tribal nations stand together in defense of the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) and the American Indian

Menominee Restoration Day

By Jeff Vele - Mohican News Editor
 December 22, 1973 is a very important date for the Menominee Nation. This is the date that a bill was passed to restore their status as a federally recognized tribe. President Nixon signed the bill on that date and the Menominee Tribe's restoration began.

In recognition and celebration of the date the College of the Menominee Nation held a Reader's Theatre entitled, "Menominee Restoration Day: Reader's Theatre That Helps Us Remember". The talents of one Stockbridge-Munsee Community member, namely Shawn Stevens, were prominently displayed in the event, as Shawn portrayed a total of six characters in the reading. Writer and director Ryan Winn said, "The production's success reinforces that theater is still the medium for Menominee storytelling. CMN plans to continue to draft scripts that inspire future generations by looking to

Shawn Stevens as Chief Oshkosh the tenacity of leaders in the past. We can't wait to showcase more impactful stories." Winn added, "Our production cast and crew decided upon the theme, "Unified resistance is mightier than the pen." To us, that sentence captures the diplomacy the Menominee used throughout history despite whichever physical

Seed Planting at Family Night

By Brett Miller-Mohican News Reporter

Recently the Mohican Family Center held a Family Night which consisted of planting seeds to grow vegetables. A light dinner of fresh salad and fixings was also served.

When planting seeds you must begin with getting the supplies ready. You will need seed starting mix. These mixes don't contain any actual soil, but they provide ideal conditions for sprouting seeds. Most importantly, they provide a good balance of drainage and water-holding capacity, and they minimize problems with disease on vulnerable seedlings. You will also need seeds, water, planting containers with drainage holes, and a few good helpers. You will then mix the seed starting mix and just enough water in a bowl to get the mix nice and damp. Do not use so much water you turn the mix into mud. Next, you put the seed mix into the containers and fill them to the top and level off. Check the seed packet for planting depth. The rule of thumb is to plant the seed two-to-three times deep as the seed is wide. If you sow seeds too deeply, they won't have enough stored energy to make it to the surface. Make sure to plant extra seeds, because not all of them will germinate. Once you are done sowing place the containers in a warm sunny place and you will soon see them sprout.

Reflections on the Waters That Are Never Still

Editor's Note: We promised you pieces from this book and we will begin in this issue of the Mohican News. We will continue to post articles and such as space on each page allows.

Jo Ann Gardner Schedler

Seventh Generation

An Introduction to Our Literary Journal

We are the seventh generation.

Our ancestors fought for the Union Army in America's Civil war 150 years ago.

We are the seventh generation of the Mohican Nation, Stockbridge-Munsee Indians, living now in Wisconsin.

Our people are the Mo He Con New, the people of the waters that are never still.

We are the seventh generation.

Our ancestors were removed from our homelands in the East.

Mohican warriors fought for our survival in every war to keep us safe.

Our ancestors were the seven generations before us and seven generations before them met Henry Hudson in 1609 along the tidal waters called Muhheakunnuk.

We are the seventh generation, still fighting to keep our lands, our culture and language for our future generations.

Our heritage and history, the bravery, courage, strength, and endurance of past generations will not be forgotten.

We are the generation now planning for our future seven generations.

Anushiik, Anushiik, Anushiik, Anushiik

The Dream of Jacob Cheeksaunkun

But your spirit is as restless
As the waters never still.
And you return to us still broken.
From that two wheeled bitter pill.

Before you go he holds you warmly
And says, "Youngblood, it's good you've come.
For you are ours and we are with you.
And your time has just begun."

"You are strong and trails are many.
You are young and long to run.
Soon you'll return to tell the story.
And as you see your morning sun.

Recall the Muh-he-con-nuck River Valley and Capt. Jacob Cheeksaunkun."

The Dream of Jacob Cheeksaunkun

You were dreaming sleeping beauty.
You were watching from afar.
You were fifty yards above us
Holding vigil where you are.

Riding bareback through the forests.
Walking the creek on Gresham farm.
Floating down the Hudson River.
King Ben and Mary at your arm.

A great feast held in your honor.
The fire is lit and dance begun.
When, with a band of Rogers Rangers,
Shows the warrior Cheeksaunkun.

Regaling all with tales of Valor,
Of Victory, and Revolution.
He calls you to his side to answer,
"Are they wise from where you've come?"

"Have they prospered and brought Honor?"
"Do they remember what we've done?"
"Do they revel in their Freedom, Bought by Naunauphtaunk and Washington?"

Friends (Acrostic Poem)

Favorite pal.

Run together.

Important secrets.

Everyday I play with her.

Nice to me.

Did play with me.

Spring we play in puddles.

The group received a huge ovation at the end of the event

Day cont from page One: threats and legislative actions they faced. We hope to get the message to everyone who sees our show to both remind and inspire them to celebrate Menominee past while looking to the future.” “This production is dedicated to the heroes of Menominee Restoration, which includes over 1,000 members of DRUMS. While we couldn’t name every one of them in a single script, their unified resistance against unenviable odds is the reason we’re all here today. We hope we’ve honored them in a good way,” said Winn. From CMN specifically, Winn would like to thank Dr. Paul Trebian, Dr. Diana Morris, Coleen Waubanascum, Melinda Cook, CMN’s maintenance department, and Quintin Fernandez. He also wanted to thank the Wisconsin Arts Board and the Seventh Generation Fund for Indigenous People for supporting our efforts. And finally, he thanked Principals Jim Reif at the Menominee Indian High School and Lori Corn at the Menominee Tribal School for bringing their students to our show, and, in Mr. Reif’s case, enabling us to use his wonderful auditorium. Winn ended by adding, “This show is the direct result of elders in the community asking me to stage a play about Menominee Restoration, but I want to give special thanks to Sylvia Wilber, Dr. Verna Fowler, Joan Delabreau, and many others for sharing their time and memories with me. I also want to thank Becky Alegria at Menominee Historic Preservation and Bethany Huse at the CMN/Menominee Public Library for help with images for the multimedia components. Without their efforts this teaching tool wouldn’t be nearly as effective.”

ICWA cont from page One: and Alaska Native children that it serves. A nationwide coalition of 325 tribal nations, 57 Native organizations, 21 states, 31 child welfare organizations, 7 members of Congress, and dozens of scholars of federal Indian law and constitutional law also stood with the parties in court during their amicus briefs supporting Native children and families through the Indian Child Welfare Act.

for all American Indian and Alaska Native children and their families. Congress, through its unique relationship with tribal nations, enacted the Indian Child Welfare Act to stop concerted efforts to actively remove Native children from their families. Today ICWA is needed more than ever to ensure that Native children, the future leaders and innovators of Indian Country, are protected and, where possible, can grow up rooted in their cultures, languages, and communities.”

“We look forward to the appeals court’s review today of the lower court’s decision,” said Dr. Sarah Kastelic, executive director of the National Indian Child Welfare Association. “The district court ruling misapprehends the government-to-government relationship between tribal nations and the federal government for over two hundred years. Never before has a federal court found ICWA unconstitutional—in fact, both federal courts and state high courts have rejected challenges to ICWA’s constitutionality time and time again since its enactment in 1978.”

“ICWA is vital to the well-being of Native children and the stability and integrity of Native families today. We can’t afford to go back to the days when massive numbers of Native children were forcibly removed from their loved ones and were often separated from their families with little hope of ever seeing them again. It’s not an option,” said the Protect ICWA Campaign. The National Indian Child Welfare Association, the National Congress of American Indians, the Association on American Indian Affairs, and the Native American Rights Fund urge the ruling of the district court to be reversed.

President Jefferson Keel of the National Congress of American Indians stated, “Indian Country welcomes the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals’ review in this matter as the district court’s clearly erroneous ruling has led to uncertainty

A decision by the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals is expected within a few months after the oral argument.

Seed cont from page One: his granddaughter Leikyn Vele. “I wanted to spend some time with my granddaughter, Leikyn,” Jeff said. Leikyn is a five-year-old who just completed 1,000 books before kindergarten. “She participated last year with seed planting and I wanted to keep her interest going. I hope she keeps a life long interest in gardening. We are having a competition so we split the containers so each of us can bring them home to see who can grow them the best,” Jeff said. Dinner consisted of build your own salad with all the toppings and dressings you could imagine.

Keshena resident Jasmine Neosh Is Named CMN Student of the Year

Jasmine Neosh has been named the College of Menominee Nation's American Indian College Fund Student of the Year for 2019. Neosh, who earned an Associate Degree in Natural Resources from CMN in May 2018, is continuing her studies at the Keshena campus for a Bachelor of Arts Degree in Public Administration.

CMN President Paul Trebian praises Neosh for both her academic and service work at the College: "Jasmine is an outstanding student scholar who would deserve the Student of the Year recognition on that basis alone. Her commitment to her tribe, the global community, and critical environmental issues are bonus points in her favor. She is an asset to the College and we know she will be doing exceptional work wherever her future career takes her."

An honors student through her time at CMN, Neosh has earned scholarships including the Land Tenure Foundation's Spirit of Sovereignty Scholarship and the Nation Builders Scholarship sponsored by Menominee Tribal Enterprises. She has been active with student-sponsored projects on recycling and led efforts to enact a campus-wide policy against the use of disposable polystyrene products. Other recent activities include service as a research assistant for Professor Dennis Vickers on planning for a new baccalaureate degree program. In early spring semester, Neosh joined President Trebian and leaders from other tribal colleges in Washington, D.C., for meetings with Wisconsin and other legislators. Most recently, she participated on the College's Knowledge Bowl team that took first place in the national student conference of the American Indian Higher Education Consortium. Neosh graduated from high school in Chicago and attended Loyola University and Columbia College there before transferring to CMN. An enrolled member of the Menominee tribe, she is the daughter of Luane Neosh and Arthur Barrios.

National Kidney Month

More than 9 out of 10 people who have kidney disease don't know they have it<sup>1</sup>

Chronic kidney disease is a serious condition, affecting more than 30 million adults in the United States, yet people in the early stages may not have symptoms. If you have diabetes, high blood pressure, or a family history of kidney failure, you are at risk for kidney disease.

DON'T WAIT.

Start the conversation with your health care provider by asking these 3 questions.

Have I been tested for kidney disease and how healthy are my kidneys?  To check for kidney disease, health care providers use a blood test and a urine test.	How often should I get my kidneys checked?  Your health care provider will help decide how often you should be tested. If you have diabetes, for example, you should get tested every year.	What should I do to keep my kidneys healthy?  You can help protect yourself from kidney disease and its causes - diabetes and high blood pressure - by adopting a healthy lifestyle for your entire family.

Bananas

The scientific name for banana is Musa, from the Musaceae family of flowering tropical plants, which distinctively showcases the banana fruit clustered at the top of the plant. Despite some negative attention, bananas are nutritious and may even carry the title of the first “superfood,” endorsed by the American Medical Association in the early 20th century as a health food for children and a treatment for celiac disease.

Bananas are a rich source of Vitamin B6, Potassium, Vitamin C, Fiber, Magnesium, and Manganese. One serving, or one medium ripe banana, provides about 110 calories, 0 grams fat, 1 gram protein, 28 grams carbohydrate, 15 grams sugar, 3 grams fiber, and 450 mg potassium.

Bananas and Health

Cardiovascular health. Bananas are an excellent source of potassium, a vital mineral and electrolyte in the body that carries a small electrical charge. Potassium is also needed to maintain a healthy balance of water in cells, and offsets the effects of excess dietary sodium.

An imbalance in the diet of too little potassium and too much sodium can lead to high blood pressure. Excessive sodium can lead to a buildup of fluid in the blood, placing pressure on the walls of blood vessels and eventually causing damage. Potassium helps the body to flush out extra sodium in the urine, and eases tension in blood vessel walls.

Digestive health. Not just easy to eat, bananas can help replete electrolytes like potassium that are lost with diarrhea or vomiting and contain resistant starch (especially if using cooked less-ripe green bananas) that may support gut healing. Unripe bananas contain resistant starch, a type of carbohydrate that “resists” digestion in the small intestine. It is absorbed slowly and does not cause sharp rises in blood sugar.

Storage

Store at room temperature away from direct sunlight, do not refrigerate green bananas as this can disrupt normal ripening. To speed up ripening, store in a brown paper bag or place near ripe fruit, which emits ethylene gas that causes ripening.

On the flipside, if you wish to slow ripening, store bananas away from other ripe bananas or fruits. Do not store in plastic bags as this traps excess moisture and may promote rotting.

Prepare

Slice ripe banana into a fruit salad. Squeeze a bit of acid like apple cider vinegar, orange juice, lime, or lemon onto the bananas to prevent darkening too quickly.

Substitute an equal amount of mashed banana for butter for dense baked goods like muffins, quick breads, and cookies. Using banana may cause the product to bake faster, so check for doneness several minutes earlier than usual or reduce the oven temperature by 25°F. The bananas will also add sweetness, so reduce the amount of added sugar in the recipe by one-quarter to one-half.

For a frozen treat, slice a peeled ripe banana in half (in the middle) and insert a popsicle stick or skewer into the flat end. Dip banana into yogurt and coat evenly; sprinkle with nuts, chopped dried fruit, cinnamon, or other favorite toppings and freeze for several hours.

For an easy dairy-free ice cream alternative, peel, chop, and freeze two medium bananas. Place into a blender or food processor and add a few tablespoons of liquid (water, dairy or plant milk, or coconut water).

Blend until smooth. Add extra liquid if additional creaminess is desired. For a different flavor, add 1-2 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa powder or nut/seed butter, a splash of vanilla extract and cinnamon, or ½ cup frozen berries. Did you know?

In many countries, banana and plantain leaves are recycled as food wrappers, such as to hold tamales and meats. They are also used to cover or wrap various foods while cooking to help seal in flavor.

Banana peels contain plant chemicals in the form of antioxidants and have long been used in traditional medicine as an antiseptic and anti-inflammatory to promote wound healing such as for bug bites, minor burns, and sunburns.

As a simple home remedy, the inside of the banana peel is pressed on a wound for several minutes.
